Pope prays for victims of 'Sendong'

VATICAN CITY—Pope Benedict XVI on Christmas Day prayed for the victims of devastating floods in the Philippines [illegible]

ONLY when we discover Christ in Christmas will we find true joy and true light, Pope Benedict XVI says in his homily during the Christmas Eve Mass.

Calungsod miracle bared

STILL with a reason to smile, two flood survivors in Iligan City carry relief goods distributed on Christmas Day, as they safely cross the Kapay River, one of the local waterways that recently overflowed and turned deadly at the height of Tropical Storm "Sendong." AFP

Remarkable recovery by comatose woman

CEBU CITY—She had no idea who Blessed Pedro Calungsod was until she benefited from a healing miracle attributed to the intercession of the young Visayan martyr.

The miracle, recorded in March 2003, had since led the woman to start a devotion to the 17th century catechist from Cebu, said Msgr. Ildebrando Leyson, a local advocate for Calungsod's sainthood.

Officials of the Archdiocese of Cebu have chosen not to disclose the woman's name for now out of respect for her privacy.

But her identity will be made public when she accompanies the Philippine delegation to the Vatican for Calungsod's canonization, now a certainty thanks to a papal decree issued last week.

Leyson described her as a businesswoman in her 50s, not a Cebuana but someone who hails from Eastern Visayas.

The woman knew nothing of Calungsod prior to her astounding recovery within hours after falling into a coma at around 2 p.m. on March 26, 2003, due to insufficient oxygen in the brain, Leyson told the Inquirer on Friday. The coma rated "3" on the Glasgow Coma Scale, meaning she had no verbal or motor response, and could not even open her eyes.

150 more bodies found in Iligan

By Dona Z. Pazzibugan

AS MANY as 150 more bodies were recovered in Iligan City on Christmas Eve, bringing the total death toll from the flash floods and landslides unleashed by Tropical Storm "Sendong" on Dec. 16-17 to over 1,200, authorities said.

"What's sad is that the number goes up every day. The body count is now 1,236," Benito Ramos, executive director of the National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Council, said in a phone interview from Iligan City on Christmas Day.

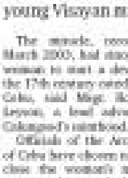

"There's no Christmas here in Iligan," Ramos said.

But hope continued to spring even as tens of thousands of flood survivors spent their Christmas meal in packed evacuation centers in the devastated city.

Aurelio Magayo, council chair of Barangay Digkilaan, joined 422 other survivors in lining up for food in the courtyard of a school that was flattened by the overflowing Mandulog River.

A merry Christmas in Bethlehem

BETHLEHEM, West Bank—Tens of thousands of tourists and Christian pilgrims packed the West Bank town of Bethlehem for Christmas Eve celebrations, bringing warm holiday cheer to the traditional birthplace of Jesus on a raw, breezy and rainy night.

With tourism on Saturday evening at its highest in more than a decade, proud Palestinian officials said they were praying the celebrations would bring them closer to their dream of independence.

Bethlehem, like the rest of the West Bank, has fallen on hard times since the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation broke out in late 2000. As the fighting has subsided in recent years, tourists have returned in large numbers.

By late night, the Israeli military, which controls movement in and out of town, said some 100,000 visitors, including foreigners and Arab Christians from Israel, had reached Bethlehem, up from 70,000 the previous year.

Another Filipino saint

EDITORIAL

TODAY IS the feast day of Saint Stephen, the first Christian martyr, and Filipino Catholics may well connect the celebration with the excitement over the impending canonization of Blessed Pedro Calungsod. A Visayan catechist of the 17th century who was killed by the Chamorros of the Marianas (today's Guam), Pedro is set to be raised to the altar for wider veneration only a little more than a decade after his beatification in 2000. He follows more or less the path of the Filipino protomartyr, San Lorenzo Ruiz de Manila, who was beatified in 1981 and canonized in 1987, in one of the swiftest canonizations in history.

There's really nothing fundamentally different between beatification and canonization. Both essentially attest that a Christian had died in principal virtue and is enjoying beatitude in heaven. But while beatification proposes a beato be venerated for a limited cult, a canonization offers him for wider, more universal veneration.

The Catholic Church makes a distinction between beatification and canonization for its own pastoral, apostolic mission: it holds up certain individuals who have passed away as embodiments of the Gospel message of sacrifice and charity. They are presented to the Christian community as worthy of veneration and prayers, so that they can intercede and help in the Christians' own struggles to live according to the faith. Beatifications and canonizations are instruments to bolster the communion of the Church.

Like Stephen, Lorenzo and Pedro are martyrs, their deaths attest to their virtue. [...]

More than P13-M at stake in PAGCOR's "Shower of Millions Bingo" event

Bingo aficionados will be treated to a year-end bingo bonanza as the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR) brings back its nationwide bingo-link event with more than P13 million worth of tax-paid cash prizes to be given away.

Dubbed as the "Shower of Millions Bingo", the event happens at the World Trade Center in Pasay City on December 30, 2011 at 2:00 p.m. Bingo players from the Casino Filipino provincial branches in Angeles, Bacolod, Cebu, Davao, Olongapo and Tagaytay will also be participating in the bingo event as the games from the World Trade Center will be beamed live in these casinos through the use of a videoconferencing technology.

Each bingo ticket costs P3,000 which shall entitle players to participate in ten games. One million pesos will be given away in every game from Games 1 to 9 while a jackpot prize of P2 million awaits the lucky winner in Game 10.

Eduardo Lagman, PAGCOR's Assistant Vice President for the Bingo Department, shared that apart from the millions of cash prizes to be given away in each game, PAGCOR will increase the prizes for the local players at the World Trade Center to make the event more fun-filled.

Special prizes, snacks, and a car display show also await bingo enthusiasts. "We invite everyone to join this grand bingo event and get a chance to win millions of pesos and other exciting prizes," he added.

The event will also be an avenue to raise funds for charitable causes of agent-beneficiaries which have partnered with PAGCOR for the bingo event. They include the Ateneo Alumni Association, the Philippine National Police Academy Alumni Association, the St. Joseph La Salle Alumni Association in Bacolod, the Abellana National High School Alumni Association in Cebu, and the Davao City Chinatown Development Council in Davao. Each organization can get as much as a 30% share from the sales of the first 200 bingo tickets which they can use to promote their advocacy.

According to Lagman, this is the second time that PAGCOR is holding a nationwide, electronically linked bingo event. "The first time we held it was last June 12 where we awarded more than P12 million. For our December 30 event, we increased the prizes by more than a million to make the games more exciting. This is our way of ending the year 2011 with a big bang."

"Shower of Millions Bingo" is the biggest bingo gaming event in Philippine history, with nine P1 million and one P2 million jackpots to be given away.

"During our first bingo link event, the grand winner came from Casino Filipino Cebu. She actually pooled resources with her two friends to buy the lone ticket that won them the P2 million grand prize. We are already excited to know where the next "Shower of Millions Bingo" grand winner will come from," said Lagman.

For more information on the "Shower of Millions Bingo" event, visit the nearest Casino Filipino branch, call the PAGCOR Bingo Department at (02) 536-4942 and 521-1542 local 232 or 381, or visit www.pagcor.ph.

The Biggest And Grandest San Miguel Oktoberfest Ever

If you were not one of the more than [illegible] people who trooped to the San Miguel Oktoberfest Beer Festival parties, you surely missed a lot. You missed the opportunity to enjoy all the beers of San Miguel at only 10 pesos per cup, the chance to witness the traditional grand fireworks display, the endless fun offered by the exciting games and side activities, and of course the superb live entertainment you can derive from the likes of the Dawn, Slapshock, Mayonnaise, Rocksteddy, Urbandub and many others. You also missed taking souvenir shots with the giant beer pyramid. Made of 1,200 beer mugs and constantly overflowing with golden brew, it was the first ever built to celebrate Oktoberfest anywhere in the world. The colossal structure was [illegible] feet high and covered an area of [illegible] square meters; it was the festival's centerpiece and stood as the symbol of the freshness and goodness of San Miguel Beer.

All the San Miguel Beer brands put up their respective beer tents. Each tent had a theme that reflects the personality of the beer brand housed within it. San Miguel Pale Pilsen showcased Pulutan Legends, Red Horse Beer had a rock concert theme and San Mig Light captured its club scene feel. Indeed, revelers had a great time hopping from one tent to the next, as if they were experiencing six different parties in one night.

The grand celebrations also hit Cebu, Cagayan de Oro, Angeles and Laguna, with all venues packing in the crowds to full capacity.

As if all these weren't enough, the Black Eyed Peas live in Manila concert was turned into one of this year's San Miguel Oktoberfest parties, proving that this year's Oktoberfest parties were celebrated in spectacular fashion.

10,000 Homes Okto-Raided!

The traditional San Miguel Oktoberfest On The House Raids covered a record number of homes this year. The raiding teams swept through Metro Manila and went through many other towns in Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao. They brought the Oktoberfest celebrations straight to homes, gave away Oktoberfest limited edition mugs and provided entertainment to those who weren't able to join the big kick-off parties.

Thousands Joined The Tansankatutak Fever

Beer lovers all over the country eagerly collected San Miguel Beer crowns so they can exchange them for limited edition functional mini bottles. As of this writing, almost half a million pieces of these collectible items have already been redeemed and thousands more are expected to be given away as customers can still exchange their crowns at San Miguel Brewery, Inc. Sales Offices and Bulilit [illegible] branches until December 31, 2011.

Star Studded Oktoberfest 9-ball Open

Top professional and amateur cue artists from all over the country competed at the San Miguel Oktoberfest 9-ball Open. Lee Van Corteza emerged victorious in the professional category topping a stellar field that included the likes of Efren "Bata" Reyes, Django Bustamante and Dennis Orcollo, among others. Corteza took home P[illegible] in cash while his counterpart in the amateur category, Jonel Sultan of Angeles City bagged P[illegible]. The finals matches and awarding ceremonies were held at the Resorts World Manila. More than P1.5 million in cash was awarded to the top finishers.

This year's San Miguel Oktoberfest proved to be one of the most successful to date. The awesome parties and all the exciting consumer promos have combined to reach hundreds of thousands of San Miguel Beer-loving Pinoys all over the country. It's not just our way of saying "thank you" to all. It's also getting our message across the world that the coming San Miguel Oktoberfests will be even grander and bigger, in our continued commitment to delight our valued customers. See you all next year, San Miguel Beer lovers! Cheers!

the nine-month period. The PSE noted the increase in net interest income posted by Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co. while adding that Banco de Oro Unibank and Union Bank of the Philippines also posted foreign exchange gains and higher income from service charges and fees.

The property sector booked a combined income of P31.08 billion, 19.4-percent higher than the level last year. A nonrecurring gain from the sale of investment in available-for-sale shares boosted Megaworld Corp.'s net income by 52.8 percent, the research noted. Increased revenues from real estate sales through improved sales volumes of both residential units and commercial lots likewise lifted the net incomes of Ayala Land Inc. and SM Development Corp. by 32.9 percent and 31 percent, respectively.

The mining and oil sector's aggregate income also surged 182.8 percent to P21.25 billion, benefiting from improvement in average global metal prices. In particular, Philex Mining Corp.'s revenue from gold and copper grew 58.7 percent and 27.2 percent, respectively, leading to an overall income growth of 182.9 percent in the first nine months.

Neda stands firm on '11 growth target for PH

NPC @ 75

Undaunted with challenges of the 21st century

Amid global warming, economic uncertainties, and political crisis, the National Power Corporation (NPC) has remained undaunted with the challenges it faces in the 21st century.

At 75, it still serves as the one of the largest providers and generators of electricity in the country.

The NPC was created under the Commonwealth Act No. 120 approved by then President Manuel L. Quezon on November 3, 1936.

The law nationalized the hydroelectric industry and reviewed the use by NPC of all streams, lakes, springs in the country for power generation.

Originally, the corporation was organized as a non-stock corporation owned by the government. Today, it is a semi-government, semi-private corporation committed to the highest standard of customer satisfaction.

Through its good leadership, various reforms have been undertaken to provide quality and reliable electricity and services to the people. These include cutting costs, improving services and boosting employees' morale.

"There's a big difference between NPC then and NPC now in terms of size, scope, functions and mandates. Up until the year 2000, the NPC was the dominant player in the power industry, with ownership and control of the country's major power plants and transmission network," says NPC President Froilan A. Tampinco.

But with the passage of Republic Act 9136 or the Electric Power Industry Act (EPIRA) in 2001, the company's stake in the power industry has been significantly reduced due to the privatization of its transmission assets and over 80 percent of its power plants in the main grid.

However, Tampinco clarifies that as far as reforms in the power industry are concerned, EPIRA takes a significant role.

Considered as a landmark piece of legislation, EPIRA has introduced market liberalization in the power generation sector and the regulation of the transmission and distribution sector.

Because of it, new agencies, such as National Transmission Corporation (TransCo) and Philippine Electricity Market Corporation (PEMC), were created, while the former Energy Regulatory Board was reconstituted to the Energy Regulatory Commission that laid down the specific rules on market behavior and ownership.

EPIRA seeks to achieve the twin goals of adequate power supply at reasonable rates, Tampinco explains.

main grid power plants that have not yet been privatized.

In undertaking its programs, the NPC has identified "key result areas" where it concentrates its work to remain a significant player in the power industry.

It has intensified its collection efficiency to minimize financial losses and improve its bottom line.

It has computerized its financial report and feedback systems and developed a fuel inventory monitoring system to ensure that its power plants have uninterrupted fuel supply.

Environment awareness

On the environment front, the NPC plans to develop eco-tourism projects within the watershed areas under its jurisdiction.

These eco-friendly destinations aim to increase public's awareness on the need to protect the forests and conserve the environment.

At the same time, people living in small communities within the watersheds will be given income opportunities by acting as guards to patrol and secure their areas.

Tampinco says watershed management will also be the NPC's contribution to the environmental sustainability of the country.

He declares that the NPC is targeting to reforest 150 hectares per year until 2014 in 11 watershed areas in the country.

He says to make the corporation's reforestation program successful, the NPC has partnered with communities through its "Bantay Watershed" groups.

"We will continue to ensure the safety of the operations of our dams through regular semi-annual inspections and third-party assessments every five years."

"Protocols for releases of water shall be reviewed and updated to cover both normal and flood-prone periods and dam staff will undergo continual training throughout the year to maintain vigilance and readiness at all times," Tampinco says.

Looking ahead

Tampinco explains that to be able to accomplish its commitments, the NPC will ensure its financial viability.

It will continue to operate and maintain undisposed main grid generation assets and step up operations of its missionary electrification arm – the Small Power Utilities Group (SPUG) – in compliance with EPIRA, in off-grid areas.

"We are eyeing to improve our efficiency in these areas, increasing our availability factor to 85 percent and decreasing our forced outage rates to 4 percent. New facilities, as well as replacements and upgrades of older facilities will be scheduled to install new capacities of 38.5 megawatts to all SPUG areas," the NCP chief says.

To complement his moves, alternative energy sources will be continually explored and installed where these are appropriate.

Tampinco says by 2014, his company's operations should increase by 20 percent.

Collection efficiency will be a focus, for both the IMA and SPUG operations.

"We aim to recover a sizable amount of past due accounts for all operations and streamline our billing and collection functions," Tampinco discloses.

Human resource program

The NPC has recognized human resource development as an important factor to improve competency in the power sector.

Musical and sporting activities were featured during the NPC Diamond Anniversary celebration. Among the performers were the award-winning NPC choral group and Marcelito Pomoy, Pilipinas Got Talent champion.

"We shall bolster the effectiveness of our performance management, employee orientation and human resource information systems, the streamlining of which will have been completed by 2012," Tampinco says.

"We have always believed that, more than our power plants and transmission lines, our employees are our biggest and most reliable asset," explains Tampinco.

"We are proud of our multi-talented, highly-skilled and very professional personnel who have a clear vision of what NPC is and where it should be headed."

As part of its privatization, the NPC has undergone a major organizational restructuring, which dramatically reduced its manpower complement from close to 11,000 employees in 2002 to roughly 3,300 employees.

Despite a leaner workforce, employees have maintained the NPC's status as a relevant player in the power industry through their dedication and commitment.

Improving lives of Filipinos

In the next three to five years, the NPC will continue to play an important role in improving the lives of the Filipino people, particularly in areas where there are still no electricity.

"We will do this through our SPUG, which operates almost 300 power plants with a rated capacity of more than 280 megawatts in remote islands and island barangays nationwide," Tampinco says.

The NPC alone cannot ensure that power rates will go down, or that there will always be reliable and adequate supply of quality electricity.

Through collective and collaborative efforts with other government agencies such as the Department of Energy, the Department of Trade and Industry, the National Electrification Administration as well as the private sector like the Meralco and electric cooperatives, the NPC sees success in its goal in the future.

To keep power rates down, electricity suppliers such as cooperatives and distribution utilities should also source the cheapest, most reliable power source possible for consumers and customers, which is hydroelectric power.

"However, we cannot depend exclusively on hydro because of climate-driven factors, like the onset of El Niño. Thus, what we can do is to aim for a generation mix that relies more on indigenous fuel sources like natural gas and geothermal, which are less expensive than, say, diesel and bunker fuel," Tampinco says.

The NPC's operations are concentrated in rural areas, particularly in off-grid areas not connected to the main grid. It has projects in remote island-provinces like Batanes in Luzon, Tawi Tawi and Jolo in Mindanao, and Leyte and Samar in the Visayas.

In Masbate, the NPC has partnered with the French government to implement the Philippine Rural Electrification Service project, which uses a combination of solar power and diesel mini-grids.

"We should continue to have a clear vision as to where the energy sector is headed and then sustain this with programs and targets that are practical, doable and realistic," Tampinco enthuses.

Indeed, the NPC has lighted up the lives of millions of Filipinos and given benefits to its stakeholders, customers, and consumers ... and as the year comes to a close, it hopes to define its goal with stronger commitment to the people.

Meralco sends help to Northern Mindanao

DURING THE TIME WHEN most of the residents were fast asleep, tropical storm Sendong brought in winds and created massive floods that have left hundreds of families in Cagayan de Oro and Iligan City devastated by the loss of over 900 lives. True to form, One Meralco Foundation - the corporate foundation and social development arm of the Manila Electric Company (MERALCO) sent 1,000 bottles of drinking water needed in evacuation centers as it was reported that there was a shortage of potable drinking water in these areas.

One Meralco Foundation also started distributing relief goods through partner foundations in CDO and Iligan to help the affected families.

True to Meralco's tradition of volunteerism and malasakit, Meralco employees also donated in cash and in kind while others volunteered to help in sorting the donations which will be sent to the two cities.

One Meralco Foundation is still accepting donations in cash, check or in kind for Sendong victims. Send your donations to the One Meralco Foundation office at the G/F Lopez Bldg, Meralco Center, Pasig City. Please contact [illegible] at [illegible] for further details.

Volunteerism and Malasakit. Upon hearing the news of the tragedy brought about by Typhoon Sendong, Meralco employees were quick to aid One Meralco Foundation's disaster relief operations.

Esquillo exhibits 'Kalooban Narratives'

ALFREDO ESQUILLO Jr. goes introspective in his new show "Kalooban Narratives" at Yes-aw Art Gallery. The Filipino concept of kalooban (inner self) is close to the artist's heart because "it reflects an immediate connection to what is spiritual and what is material."

In this series, Esquillo delves into salvation, prophetic accounts and spiritual realism. "They are the result of personal encounters with contemporary prophets, the faithful and believers."

"Revelation" underlines the uniqueness of every being by showing the image of a fetus inside the womb, with the word hinirang ("Chosen"), and the symbolic alpha ("A to Z").

The pregnant female in "Binhi" (Seed) suggests fecundity and the miracle of children.

"Minsan, Ako ay Pedro" (Sometimes I am Peter) is both a confession of weakness and an affirmation of faith—recalling the three times that Peter denied his Master, and his stay-upon on the cross.

In the triptych "Fruit of thy Womb," Esquillo presents himself as life-bearer, his belly heavy with a woman in his womb—in a seeming representation of the triune God.

"Pananampalataya" (Faith in Repentance) is presented as complete submission ("Tahe Ba Iyo") and as means to salvation ("Itong Pagsisisi ng Makasalanan Paakyat ng Langit ang Kanilang Pananampalataya"), with a man walking up a vertical wall, his shadow forming a cross at his feet.

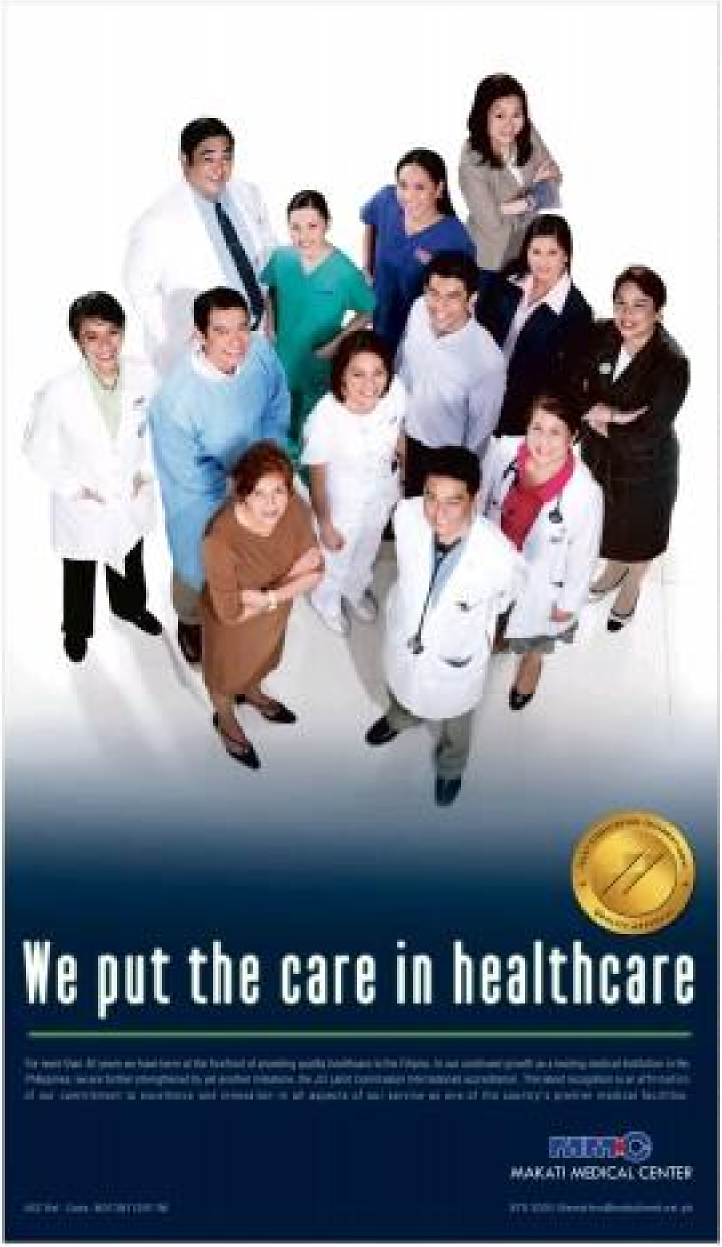

"FRUIT of thy Womb"

The artist asserts: "Realities don't belong exclusively to the physical realm." He transforms the image of the body into spiritual symbols of the inner self and the essential experience.

Esquillo, who finished Painting at the University of Santo Tomas, presents humanized and personal iconography to create a spiritual narrative in pictures: human, probing, human. He is bound to the world, with eyes already looking to another.

He sums up thus: "The truth is the essence of living. We find it through faith. But the truth and faith will always be challenged in time. We should be ready when the time comes."

"Kalooban Narratives" runs until Jan. 6. Yes-aw Gallery is at the Upper Ground Floor of Somerset Olympia, Makati Ave., Makati City. Contact 8927122; www.yes-aw.com

Exhibits running at the West Gallery: Queer Day Out, Ripples, until Jan. 7. Kawayan de Guia's "Windows to the Future, The First Last Year" in Gallery 1; Ronald Ventura's "Some Thing Smaller Than the Sum of Its Parts" in Gallery 2; Luis Santos' "Modules/Variations" in Gallery 3; Carlos Santos' "Excursions from the End of the World" in Gallery 4, ongoing until Dec. 31. Sanchez's latest paintings are a recollection of thoughts, fragments of memories, loose conversations and shared stories. He turns to toys to recapture bits of his childhood; he draws his subjects from old line-drawings, cell phone camera photos and presents them in a visual array of pop culture markers.

Zean Cabangis and Nikki Luna at Silverlens

Eyelands and collages make up the paintings—two visions are placed side by side, the photographic badges in coordinating composition. Zean Cabangis features acrylic and photo transfers of urban spaces in rest of the Biblic. Luna conceptual installations surreal, putting snippets from family photos of political struggle in tight box drawers. Also in Silverlens: "Mutation," paintings by Jojo Serrano and "The Nickels," mixed-media installation by Jeri Pascua in 20Square. The shows run until Feb. 4, 2012 at Silverlens Gallery. 2/F YMC Bldg. UE students reap art awards

STUDENTS OF the College of Business Administration (CBA)-Caloocan and the College of Fine Arts (CFA) of the University of the East have reaped recognition and awards in various visual arts competitions.

Ashmel D. Vicente, a second-year Painting student at the UE College of Fine Arts, was awarded third place in the Painting competition of 2011 Metrobank Art and Design Excellence (Made) competition, for his 48" x 36" oil-on-canvas work, "Front-Station," which tackles the issue of student prostitution in the country, earning for him a P150,000 cash prize and a trophy.

At the 2011 Philippine National Oil Company (PNOC) Painting Contest, Joseph G. Lapitan and Kevin Jeffrey D. Buenagua, both fourth-year Advertising Arts students, were chosen among the 12 Best Entries whose works will be featured in PNOC's 2012 Calendar of PNOC. Also competing in the final round was Angelo Vincent de Guzman, also a fourth-year Advertising Arts student.

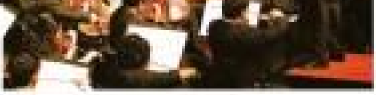

Jemaree Louie M. Bolosa (second year, Painting), John S. Santorelo and Ralph John F. Panaliu (both fourth year, Advertising Arts) were recognized as semi-finalists in the Vision Petron. Bolosa joined the Painting-Acrylic Category, while Santorelo ("Bread or Success") and Panaliu ("My Daily Routine") were semifinalists in the T-shirt Graphic Design Category.

In the 44th Shell National Student Art Competition, Morgan C. Martinelo, a second-year Advertising Arts student, got honorable mention for his work, "Imaginarium," in the Acrylic competition. Kevin Jeffrey Domingo was also a finalist.

Grammy to honor Steve Jobs

STEVE Jobs

LOS ANGELES—The Grammys will pay special tribute to late Apple founder Steve Jobs, Brazil's Tom Jobim—of "Girl from Ipanema" fame—and US singer Diana Ross at the coming awards show, the organization announced Wednesday.

The Apple cofounder and mind behind the wildly popular iPod, iPad and iPhone died in October after battling pancreatic cancer.

Jobs, a Trustees Award honoree, will be remembered as having helped "create products and technology that transformed the way we consume music, TV, movies, and books," a statement from the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences said.

Lifetime Achievement Awards will be given to the Allman Brothers Band, country crooner Glen Campbell, Antonio Carlos Jobim, country star George Jones, soul stars the Memphis Horns, Ross and rap trailblazer Gil Scott-Heron, at the 54th edition of the awards fete.

Jobim, who died in 1994 at 67, is considered one of Brazil's most influential musicians, helping carry world success for the bossa nova.

Diva Diana Ross, 67, won an Academy Award nomination for her turn as Billie Holiday in "Lady Sings the Blues" (1972), and will be honored for her musical career that has spanned decades. Though she has been nominated for Grammys on many occasions, the Lifetime Achievement honor will be her first Grammy.

"This year's honorees offer a story of brilliance, contributions and lasting impressions across culture," said Neil Portnow, president and CEO of The Recording Academy. "It is an honor to recognize such a diverse group of individuals whose talent and achievements have had an indelible impact on our industry."

Vinicius de Moraes and Tom Jobim wrote the legendary "Garota de Ipanema" (Girl from Ipanema) in 1962, and it became a sort of anthem of Brazilian culture, with covers done by everyone from Frank Sinatra to Nat King Cole and Madonna. AFP
